

CARBON CENTURIONS SCORE ANOTHER WORLD FIRST!

World's first carbon community cricket team win on 95th ball!

Carbon Centurions launched on Friday 2 July, when a team of players representing clubs supporting our initiative played the world's first Carbon Balanced cricket club, Eight Ash Green. To our knowledge this is the first game of its type anywhere in the world.

The Carbon Centurions XI picture shows players representing Cirencester, Coggeshall, Copford, West Bergholt, Kelvedon & Feering, Colchester & East Essex, Old Chelmsfordians, Eastons, Dulwich Lawnmower, Bicester & North Oxford and East Rainton cricket clubs. "The majority of the clubs are local to minimise travel," explained organiser Richard Parker, "but we have interest from Cirencester in the south west to East Rainton in the north east and it was a wonderful way to launch the project!"

Fittingly, the game was played in the new 'The Hundred' format. "It worked really well," enthused Carbon Centurions' captain Andrew Woodhouse from Dulwich Lawnmower CC, "varying the length of overs took some getting used to but we sussed it out and won in the 95th ball. It was a great game!"

Carbon Centurions aims to turn the world's first Carbon Balanced cricket club into the world's first Carbon Balanced cricket community by helping 100 cricket clubs become Carbon Balanced in just 100 days. The project ends on 30 September and anybody interested in getting their club involved should go to the Carbon Centurions website at www.carboncenturions.com to register their interest.

Release: Monday, 12 July 2021.
